ELECTRIC RAILWAYS COMING.

Students of Electrical Engineering Paying Special Attention To Construction of Electric Locomotives.

"Danger! 110 Volts!" on a big satirical sign protected the public from a little miniature electric railway system at the recent remarkable exhibit given by the students of Highland Park College, Des Moines, Ia., on the campus of that institution.

The track was a foot wide and the electric locomotive, although smaller than a boy's play wagon, had every detail of the big ones in operation on traction railroads. It pulled its loads up grades and darted around with all the assurance of a little dog trying to look like a big one. An immense amount of labor and technical skill was required to make this electric locomotive of such small dimensions. It is the handiwork of George Courtney, of Amboy, Ill., a student in the college of electrical engineering at Highland Park, and it was exhibited to illustrate the practicability of the work done by students there, along lines of great interest for the future.

WANTED TO BE A "SUB-MARINE."

Spokane, Wash.—"I want to be a submarine," said Applicant Charles Cable, a farmer, to Corporal William T. McCullough at the United States marine recruiting station in Spokane.

"Oh, a marine," said the corporal.

"No, a submarine," persisted Cable.

The applicant looked desirable and worth explaining matters to.

"You have been misinformed," argued the recruiting officer pleasantly.

"A submarine is a boat which travels under water. If you enlist as a marine you will probably see lots of submarines, but you can't be one."

"Then I can't be a submarine?"

"Nope," said the corporal.

With a last wistful glance at the goldfish in the globe on the corporal's desk, the disappointed applicant left.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING IS THE ROAD TO ECONOMY.

May Cherries.

"May cherries are on the market," says the market news, but it does not go into details. If it did and if it was truthful, it would read like this, "May cherries are on the market, but they are not evenly ripened and are somewhat too sour for pleasurable eating."

Yet this first fresh fruit is eagerly purchased by cherry lovers and there are many ways it may be used in and enjoyed.

Of course we think first of cherry pie. Who does not when it is so full of flavor and juicy and good to the eye and the taste?

Make the paste with plenty of shortening and line a heavy pie tin or baking dish with it; fill with the cherries; sweeten generously and cover with the top paste. Pinch the edges close together and decorate the tops with fancy slits. Bake until it is well colored. The best cherries for pie are a mixture of sour and sweet ones; as they become plentiful remember this.

When serving cherry pie have it warm but not hot and powdered sugar over the top.

If you have but a few cherries, perhaps only a cupful, you can make a cherry pudding that will serve four and not seem to stint them over this recipe.

Cut a loaf of stale bread into slices, remove the crust and butter the bread. You should have one slice for each person to be served. Place bread in buttered baking dish and cover with a raw custard mixture made with one quart of milk, one cup of sugar, three beaten eggs and the stoned cherries. Butter enough more sliced bread to cover over top. Set the baking dish in a pan of water and place in oven, cover and bake forty-five minutes and then uncover and brown. Eat with a hot sweet sauce.

Cherry cobbler is like strawberry shortcake—the last word in good eating. The cherries should be ripe, fresh and juicy. Stone them and place in a shallow buttered baking dish. Add sugar to taste and with the sugar mix one tablespoon of corn starch. Dot bits of butter over this, using about one tablespoonful to a medium sized pudding. Add spice if you like it, it is not needed. Make the dough over the baking powder biscuit recipe that you use, but make it thin enough to pour. Bake until well done. Invert on a platter and the cherries will be on top and there should be waiting a hot sauce to serve with the dish.

For centuries it has been believed that the cherry has certain properties that promote cheerfulness. Modern science has proven this to be true by making the cherry bark into helpful tonics and today the wild black cherry and choke cherry are an important contribution to makers of medicines.

RECIPES FOR STRAWBERRY DISHES.

Who was it who said of the strawberry that God doubtless could have made a better berry—but He never did? Whoever he was, he voiced the sentiments of probably the great majority of the people who have access to this delicious fruit. Strangely enough, however, great numbers of housekeepers invariably serve the strawberry as a natural, forgetting apparently that variety is the spice of life, and that there are numberless delicious desserts that may be made with these berries. A few recipes for these are given hereafter.

Strawberry Sponge.
Bake a sponge cake in a round pan. Carefully cut off the top, hollow out the center, and fill with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored and mixed with one cup of mashed strawberries. Replace the top and serve on a large plate.

Strawberry Whip.
One and one-fourth cups strawberries, 1 cup powdered sugar, white of one egg. Put the ingredients in a bowl and beat with a wire whisk until stiff enough to hold in shape; about thirty minutes will be required for beating. Pile lightly on a dish, chill, surround with lady fingers and serve with cream or boiled custard.

Strawberry Ice.
One quart box of strawberries, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water, a little lemon juice. Sprinkle the strawberries with sugar, cover and let stand two hours. Mash, add water and lemon juice to taste, then freeze.

A delightful sauce for cottage and other puddings is made by a hard sauce—made by together a tablespoonful of butter with two of powdered sugar—sufficient crushed strawberries to make the sauce a color. Serve the pudding with the sauce.

Down as sweet strawberries are not only a culinary delicacy, but an excellent recipe for the following: 1 tablespoonful strawberries, 1 half teaspoonful lemon juice, 1 third cup butter, 1 1/4 tablespoonfuls lard, one-third cup milk.

Mix dry ingredients and sift twice, work in shortening with tips of fingers, add egg well beaten and milk. Roll out until about two inches thick, and bake. Split and butter the sides, pile the lower half with strawberries which have been crushed and sweetened, and decorate the top with whole strawberries set in whipped cream.
